

SNIPER

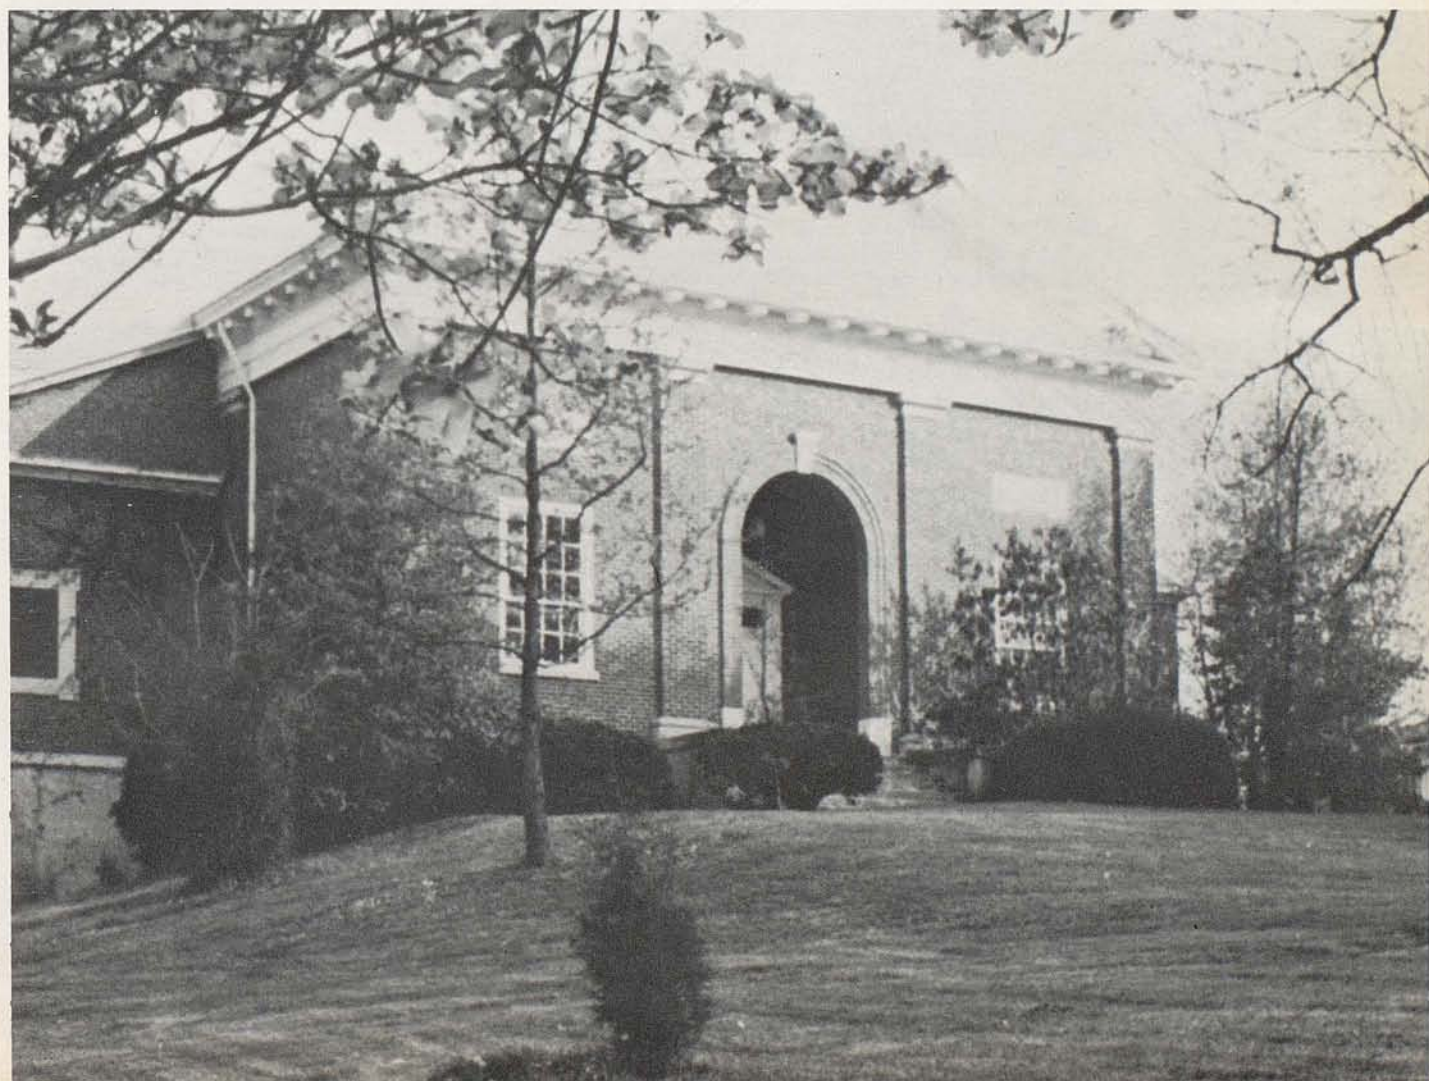

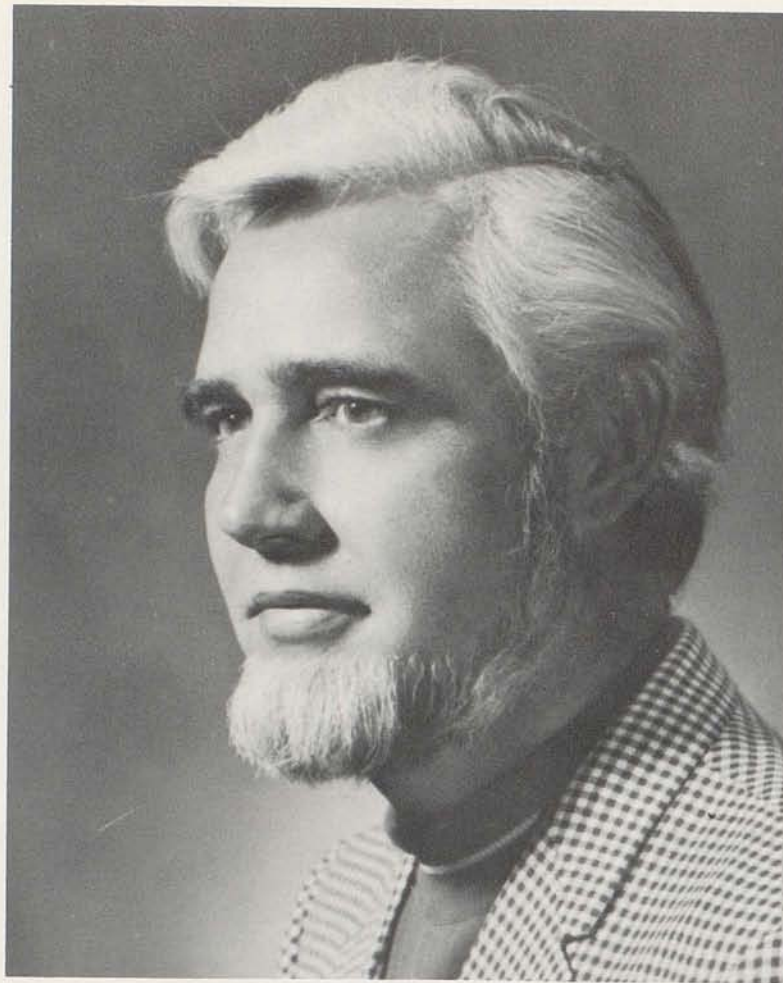

The faculty and cadets of Millersburg Military Institute present the 1974 Sniper

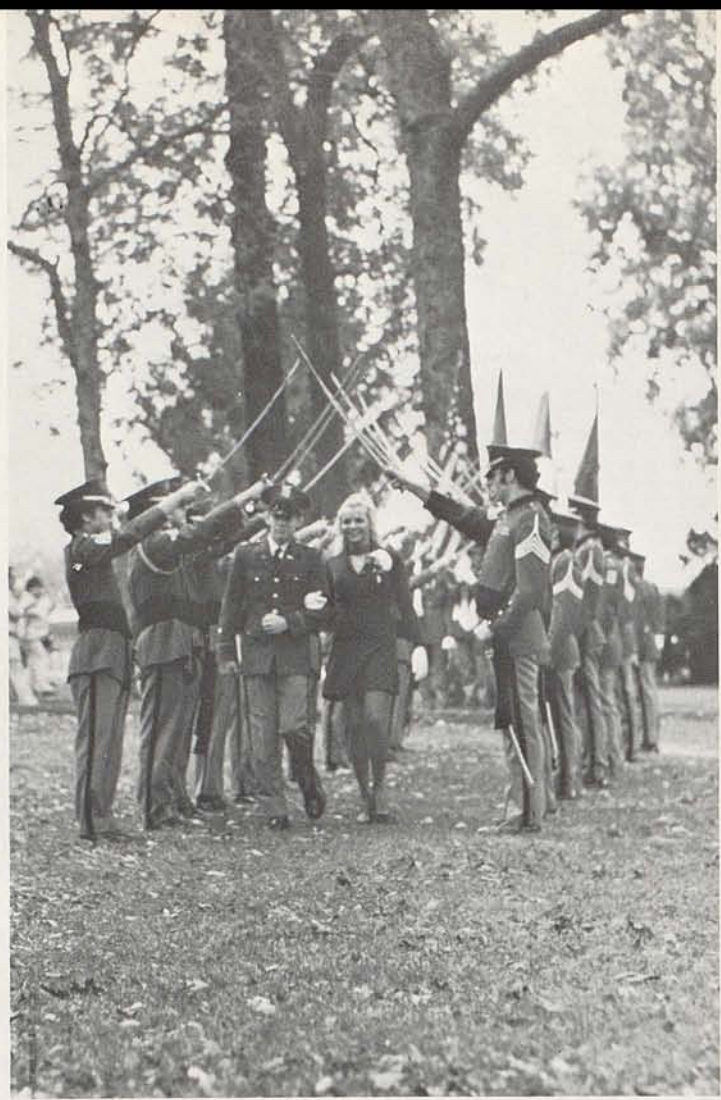

To the faculty who knew Major John Steele at one time or another during the twenty years he served MMI, and to the hundreds of cadets who passed through his courses in English grammar, the first classroom on the left seems incredibly quiet now, no longer resonating with the indignant cry, "You wretched creature!" And "To the board, you dumb boy!" no longer echoes down the corridor.

His teaching was thorough and exacting; his rages were tempered by humor; his honest concern for the welfare of the cadets was disguised by a unique personality--acerbic and, at the same time, hilariously funny.

TEACHER-OF-THE-YEAR--LTC. F.H. HALL

Cadet of the Year

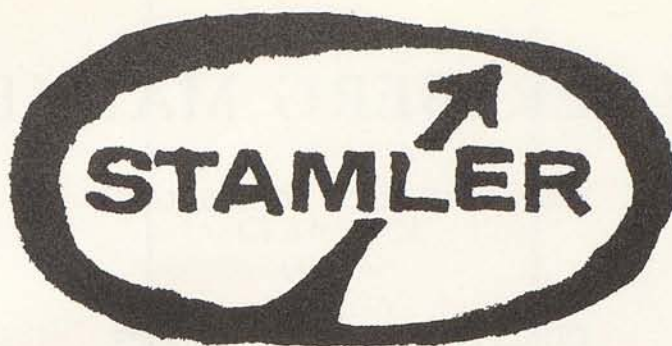

Valedictorian

On March 9, 1974, while hiking in a rugged area 2½ miles from Millersburg, Cadet Greg Frankel fell down a steep hill and suffered severe head injuries. The fall stunned Frankel and he lost a great deal of blood from a cut on his head. Frankel's two companions, Cadets Jon Hill and Mike Gallagher, immediately rushed to his assistance, covered and protected the wound, and calmed the injured youth. Realizing the severity of the wound and the grave possibility of Frankel's dying, Hill and Gallagher made Frankel get on his feet and walk. Despite Frankel's protests, Hill and Gallagher half carried him over 2½ miles of steep hills and gullies. The efforts of Cadets Hill and Gallagher in keeping Frankel from going into shock and in getting him to medical assistance in the shortest time possible, were later credited by a doctor with undoubtedly saving his life. Their calmness in the face of a difficult situation, their concern for their comrad, and their physical stamina reflect highly on Hill and Gallagher. Their actions are in keeping with the highest traditions of Millersburg Military Institute and the United States Army Junior ROTC program, and serve as an outstanding example of courage and achievement. Both were later awarded the Department of the Army Medal for Heroism.
